Hounds: Wipi, Discomfort, Excremental Earnings, Hey YO! Paully,
In Up to His Waste, Natural Born Lesbian

Weather: Sticky

Time: 1:25 including fluid break

Venue: Woodfield Reservation to Province Line Bridge

Revolted food: Hand's irredeemable Vanilla Vienna Fingers

There and Back Again

Not that this hash featured dragons or slimy devolving creatures playing guessing games, but the feet of at least one of the participants have hair. Hand was again surprisingly well behaved, reversing Nonsensei's set (PHHH #878.4) until we reached Stony Brook Dam by behind P'ton Day School.

A particularly devilish checkmark or especially clueless pack took some time finding true trail, and after some hopping behind houses and plodding down suburban roads we reached Hand's Fluid Break on the north side of the bridge

No one drank any beer, indicating just how degraded this Hash is becoming, and then the pack descended to the Brook which wasn't as full as when Geezer lost his shirt (PHHH #878.4) and followed and crossed it a couple of times to the relief of the hounds' feet before petering out below the power lines to Zorgon's lair

More pointless wandering ensued before we figured out that the sucker went up the bloody hill to a check mark, to another check mark and looping thence more or less back via Hand's flour-out streak to the Fluid Break turned On-In at the Bridge.

Hand recited the Owl and the Pussycat which merited him a down-down and the proposal that the Mr. Lear's romantic ditty become the PHHH's official toasting poem.

Meanwhile, EE, who is soon to depart for the Courtauld Institute (EE's room is over the middle arch), ate the creme from the awful Vienna fingers and committed more-or-less to setting her second or maybe third hash before heading east. How's Wednesday the 26th sound?
